NEW STRIKE TO BOTHER PROBERS

West Virginia Miners Out Again
as Senate Committee
Starts for State.

PEONAGE WITNESSES GATHER

Sergeants-at-Arms Ready to Summon Those Showing
Hesitancy to Obey.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 8.—A local strike has broken out in the New River coal field in Raleigh county. Several hundred men are involved. At Stamford five hundred are out because of the alleged refusal of the operators to allow a checkweightman on the tipple. The national organization of mine workers is not yet interested in these two outbreaks.

Gather Peonage Witnesses.

P. J. Paulson and other union organizers are rounding up their witnesses for the Senate investigation to begin here Tuesday.

"We expect to have about 100 witnesses," said Mr. Paulson today. "Some of them will come from New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, and other cities. Men who had to steal out of West Virginia to keep from being railroaded into prison will come back to testify."

The disappearance of E. W. Gawghot, who is described by the mine workers as the chief strong-arm man of the Baldwin-Pets guards, is causing concern among the miners. About three months ago Gawghot was division superintendent for the armed guards in the West Virginia coal fields, but later dropped out of sight.

Fear For Fate of Guard.

There are two theories about Gawghot, who was much feared by mine workers. The first is that he has been sent away to keep him from testifying in court or any other investigation. The second is that he was killed in the mountains by desperate miners. The mine workers have asked the Senate (Continued on Fifth Page.)

TRACES PARENTAGE BY BLOOD CRYSTALS

Prof. Reichert Completes Series of Tests, Adding Proof to Evolution Theory.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—As a result of investigations conducted in his laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania over a period of twenty years, Edward Tyson Reichert, professor of physiology in the medical department, has arrived at a point where he can virtually determine the father of a child by a comparison of blood crystals of the supposed parent with those of the offspring.

"Within the next year," he says, "I will have established proof that heredity can be traced through the blood crystals."

Scientists pronounce Prof. Reichert's discovery as the most important step toward scientific solution of the theory of evolution that has yet been attained.

The work of the University of Pennsylvania professor, which includes the measurement of minute blood crystals to a remarkably accurate degree, has revolutionized old theories of life relationship. His two works, published by the Carnegie Institute, one two years ago and one within the last month, have startled the scientific world.

Two years ago Prof. Reichert found that the blood crystals from six species of baboons resembled the blood crystals of man, and which he completed that series of chemical tests he had found that he was nearer the theory of evolution than any other scientist had ever been. An important result of this discovery was its practical application in the detection of criminals.

In the second work he has traced the foundation of the genera of plant life, and in studying among the vertebrate kingdom he has established rules for the determination of the relationship of all forms of animal and vegetable life.

Now he is completing experiments which will carry the theory into the realm of human life, and by a comparison of blood crystals he is certain he can trace the parentage of a child.

LOST CAUSE DEAD NOT LOST TO MIND

Friends and Old Foe to Praise
Courage of Those Who Fought for South.

Unusual interest attaches to the Confederate Memorial Day services in the National Cemetery at Arlington today, for it is the tenth anniversary of the decoration of the graves of the Southern soldiers there, and the fiftieth anniversary of the eve of the battle of Brandy Station, one of the greatest encounters of cavalry in the history of wars.

The ceremonies will be unique in that one of the speakers, Congressman Sanford Kirkpatrick, a veteran of the Union army, and one of the speakers, will feelingly recount the valor of the men against whom he fought half a century ago.

Generous To Foeman.

The invitation to speak was given to Mr. Kirkpatrick because he played the Good Samaritan to a wounded Confederate at the battle of Corinth. The Confederate was Capt. John M. Hickey, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Their first meeting in fifty years occurred a few days ago at the Capitol, where, in recounting their war experiences, it developed that Congressman Kirkpatrick was the man who had been so generous to a wounded foe in the historic struggle.

Prior to the address of Mr. Kirkpatrick, Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia will give a stirring talk in which he recounted the deeds which won immortality for the Southern soldiers, dwelling especially on the achievements of the army of Virginia and the unsurpassed qualities of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Music and Prayers.

Music will be furnished by the Fifteenth United States Cavalry Band, and by a quartet composed of Mrs. Anne Grant-Fugitt, Mrs. Anne Rogers Dalton, Melville D. Hensley and Charles W. Moore, with Albert G. Eldridge as accompanist. "The Plains of Peace," a solo, will be sung by Mrs. Grant-Fugitt, following the address of Senator Swanson.

The invocation is to be by the Rev. Forest J. Prettymann, Chaplain of the Senate, and the Rev. W. W. Brander, chaplain at Fort Myer, will pronounce (Continued on Eleventh Page.)

RISKS LIFE TO SAVE DAUGHTER

Hotel Owner Fights Through Smoke Only to Find His Child Is Safe.

FAINTS IN HIS WIFE'S ARMS

Match Dropped in the Park
Hotel Starts Blaze Which Causes $3,000 Loss.

A burning match dropped on the floor of a storeroom in the Park Hotel, either by a guest who entered by mistake or by some one who sought some valuable old silver stored there, is believed to have started the blaze there early this morning, which came near costing the life of Frank Endres, the proprietor.

Finds Daughter Is Safe.

Believing that his thirteen-year-old daughter, Beatrice, was in her room asleep, Mr. Endres fought his way through the flames that filled the narrow hall on the third floor, only to find that she had returned earlier in the evening to the Holy Cross Academy, where she is attending school. Smoke filled the room, but when the father fell across the empty bed he knew his effort had been in vain.

He recovered himself and rushed back through the hall, which was a veritable furnace, and after running to his room to save a jeweled pin given him by Prince Henry when that personage visited Washington a few years ago, he fell fainting in the arms of his wife, and was later carried to Emergency Hospital, where his wounds were dressed.

Son Makes His Escape.

In the meantime Beatrice Endres, who recently won much praise in an entertainment given at the Academy, was in ignorance of the fact that her father's anxiety for her safety had all but cost his life. Her first news of the fire was a telephone message from her mother several hours later. Earl Endres, fifteen years old, was awakened by his father as soon as the fire was discovered and escaped without injury.

"The fire was started by some stranger in the store room, and I believe they went there to steal my silver," said Mrs. Endres, the pretty wife of the proprietor, who discovered the fire and gave the first alarm. "The fire was started by a light globe in the room, and if anyone was in there for a lawful purpose they would have been seen."

"The condition of the trunks and the walls shows that the fire started on the floor, while all the electric wires were on the ceiling. It would have been a good time for a thief to enter, as it was after midnight. Mr. Endres was closing up the bar, while I was out on the roof garden."

Nothing was missed from the room where the fire started, but so much was destroyed that an inventory is impossible. Several antique silver pieces, the winter clothes of the wife, and a large amount of linen were ruined. The total loss is estimated at $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

Archbald Loses First Case as Trial Lawyer

SCRANTON, June 8.—The first appearance in court as a lawyer of Robert W. Archbald since his impeachment as Commerce Court judge by the United States Senate, resulted adversely for him today, when a jury directed that the will of Mrs. Mary Ives, of Ransom township, be set aside.

Archbald appeared for Frank Ives, son of the testator, and principal beneficiary. Two sisters of Ives and the children of a deceased third sister charged that Mrs. Ives was under the influence of her son and that he guided her hand when she signed the will. This was refuted by Ives, who produced several witnesses to prove that his mother was of testamentary capacity.

Archbald's eagerness to make a good showing as a trial lawyer in the proceedings special interest. Although the case was not large, the Ives family is well known.

"Poisoned Pen" Case In Court Tomorrow

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 8.—Twenty-five recipients of "poisoned pen" letters will appear in court here tomorrow to face Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard, wife of an official of the public service commission, who is accused of threatening to kidnap Charles Frederick Jones, son of a next-door neighbor, Dr. Charles F. Jones.

This threat was contained in a letter written several months ago. Dr. Jones, an investigation conducted by Detective Thomas Carey led to the arrest of Mrs. Pollard. Carey charges that not only this letter, but many others, received by different persons and containing all sorts of accusations, came from the same source.

Britain Accused of Violating U. S. Laws

MOBILE, Ala., June 8.—Capt. Joseph N. Chute, master of the British schooner Bartholomew, operating between Mobile and Jamaica, was indicted by the grand jury that adjourned last night, for violating the immigration laws by allowing Maude Durand, a Jamaican woman, to land from his ship without permission.

It is believed she is aged 20.

TURTLE VACCINE ACTION NEGATIVE

No Results Have Come From Injections at Clinic Held in Washington Hospital.

BLUE DENIES ASSERTIONS

Rambaud Says He Asked Federal Supervision, Surgeon General Says He Did Not.

No results, either good or bad, have come from the Dr. Friedmann "turtle serum" tuberculosis treatment, injected into a dozen Washington patients April 14, according to Dr. B. M. Randolph, in charge of the George Washington Hospital clinic's Friedmann patients.

Dr. Randolph declared today that the treatment thus far had been negative.

One More Ill.

Only one case, he declared, had shown any ill effects, and these he asserted positively, are not due to the turtle serum.

"You can say that there is no change either way," Dr. Randolph told The Times officially today.

Dr. Mannheimer, of New York, reported six cases for the worse, and two abscess cases in eighteen Friedmann patients that have come under his attention, while none of the patients, he says, shows any improvement.

Surgeon General Blue, of the Public Health Service, today denied emphatically the press agent assertion of Dr. George G. Rambaud, of the Friedmann Institute, of New York, which says: "As soon as I accepted the direction of the Institute I entered into communication with Surgeon General Blue, expressing my desire to have all work supervised officially by a representative of the Public Health Department."

No Communication.

In answer to this statement, Dr. Blue said, "I have not received such a request, nor any communication from the Friedmann Institute."

The letter of Dr. Rambaud is as follows: "Much of the criticism expressed in regard to the Friedmann Institute is due to the fact that its policy has been generally misunderstood. Erroneous reports were circulated to the effect that few physicians would receive personal instruction from Dr. Friedmann and then retain a practical monopoly of the treatment."

"The truth is that any physician in good standing may be instructed free of charge at the institute in the administration of the vaccine, and either treat his patients himself, or on the premises, or have them treated under his supervision."

"While the place where the treatment is administered is otherwise immaterial, it is thought best to have every patient call at the institute for reasons of safety, and above all things, in order that complete scientific data concerning each individual case be centralized and made available at any time for statistical and reference purposes."

Asked Supervision.

"As soon as I accepted the direction of the Institute, I entered into communication with Surgeon General Blue, expressing my desire to have all work supervised officially by a representative of the Public Health Department."

"I was in the so-called 'commercial end' of our work, I wish to remind the public that the Friedmann treatment is given absolutely free of charge to every patient who cannot afford to pay for it."

The preparation of the vaccine could not be entrusted to men lacking the required training and experience. It is expected, however, that the vaccine can be safely given out to the medical profession at large within two or three years.

Judge's Lack of Faith Sends Man to Prison

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—John Walsh, a Long Island contractor, who had served several months of a year's term on conviction as a thief, was released from prison today when it was established that he was the victim of a judicial error.

Walsh had had attacks of mental aberration, and last January he wandered into this city and tried to find an old friend, George Dougherty, given him, but his friend did not live there, and Walsh was arrested. He told the court he had got in the wrong house, but the judge smiled and said he had often heard that tale.

When put in jail Walsh wrote to his wife and she came to this city and hunted day after day until she found Dougherty at Eddy's Dougherty admitted he used to live at the address where Walsh was arrested. The matter was then placed before Judge Carr, who issued an order for the man's release.

POLICE ON TRAIL OF DOG POISONER

Twenty-five Valuable Animals
Have Died From Strychnine
in Chevy Chase.

Food injected with strychnine, scattered broadcast, is working havoc in Chevy Chase, where scores of the city's most valuable dogs are kept. More than a dozen animals have died during the last fortnight, bringing a month's record to the twenty-five mark.

Joseph Craig reported to Police Headquarters this afternoon that a spaniel, valued at $50, had been poisoned early in the day, and requested the police to institute and investigate.

Prize Dog Barely Escapes.

The dog discovered a small price of sausage by a tree box, near the Craig home this morning, and before the owner could take it from him, had consumed it. The animal died in fifteen minutes. A veterinarian was summoned, and he pronounced it strychnine poisoning.

The Great Dane, owned by Griffin Halstead, highly valued and possessor of half a dozen blue ribbons obtained at Eastern dog shows, had a narrow escape from a similar fate two days ago, when it ate sausage mixed with strychnine. A veterinarian worked over the prize dog for six hours and finally succeeded in saving it. The valuable dogs of Barry Mohan, a Washington lawyer, and Mrs. Martin, both of whom live in Chevy Chase, have died during the last few days as a result of strychnine poisoning.

For several days the residents of fashionable Chevy Chase have done amateur detective work trying to locate the poisoner, but without success. It was decided today to ask the police to assist them in finding the culprit.

Heirs to $45,000,000 Row in Harvard Shell

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 8.—When the Harvard varsity meets Yale in the annual boat race at New London June 20, the oarsmen in the Crimson varsity shell will represent $45,000,000 of heirs to a fortune.

They will compete with oarsmen who are coached by W. Averell Harriman, whose father left a $70,000,000 estate.

The Harvard crew are nearly all sons of millionaires. In the list are representatives of the Morgan, Meyer, Murray and Chandler families of New York, the Trumbull and Harwood families of Boston, and the Mills family of Portland, Ore. The fortunes of eight of the oarsmen range from $1,000,000 to $25,000,000. E. D. Morgan, of Westbury, L. I., leading.

Alaskan Volcanoes In Violent Eruption

SEATTLE, Wash., June 8.—Violent eruption of all the volcanic islands of the Aleutian archipelago and the mountains of the Alaska peninsula is reported by the officers of the United States mail steamer Dora, Captain McMillen, which arrived at Seward from Unalakleet and Dutch Harbor today.

Not within the present generation have so many of these towering peaks been belching fire and smoke at one time. Particularly active are Mounts Pavlov, McCushion, and Shishaldin.

BUSINESS BLOCK SWEEP BY FLAMES

Long Island City Buildings
Burn With Loss of Over Million Dollars.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., June 8.—A fire which still rages but under control, and which up to 3 o'clock had done damage of more than a million dollars, started shortly after 9 o'clock in the business section of this place.

The flames were first discovered in the three-story building of the Columbia Paper and Bag Company, at Van Alst and Third streets. In a short while the building was in ruins, in spite of heroic efforts of the fire department to check the blaze.

The adjoining structure, occupied by the American Druggist Syndicate, next caught fire, and before it was consumed the flames had spread to the Pratt and Lambert Varnish Company. The many floors of inflammable material in this building gave a great impetus to the conflagration, and made all hope of saving it or the adjoining property useless. The Blanchard warehouse also went up in flames.

A tank containing hundreds of gallons of varnish exploded and drove a ball of fire from a roof from which they were directing lines of hose.

Four of them were dragged half dead from the plant of the drug syndicate. Fumes overcame them less than a minute after they were in the building. Because of the grave danger from suffocation and explosions Chief Lally directed the men to keep out of the building.

Traffic on the lines of the Long Island railroad entering and leaving Long Island City was delayed for hours by the fire.

Customs Officers Find Gems Sewed in Shirt

NEW YORK, June 8.—Eberhard Lewitanski, a diamond importer, of 222 South Fourteenth street, Chicago, arrived here on the Philadelphia today.

Mr. Lewitanski had a number of trunks, and all the while the inspectors were examining them he insisted vehemently that he had nothing dutiable. Acting Deputy Surveyor thought it might be a good thing to examine his clothing, and $1,000 worth of diamond rings and pins were found carefully sewed up in the importer's shirt.

On board the Philadelphia also were Mrs. A. W. Swalm, wife of the consul general at South Hampton, who will visit her daughter, the wife of Commander Milton E. Reed, of the battleship Kansas. She left for Newport.

Keene's Injury Places Damper on Americans

NEW YORK, June 8.—Foxhall P. Keene, newly chosen captain of the American polo team, who broke his collar-bone yesterday, said today that he lamented the fact that he would be unable to take part in the defense of the International Cup more than he did the injury he received.

Coming seventy-two hours before the contest with the English team sent over by the Duke of Westminster, Mr. Keene's mishap threw a damper over the American hopes. The accident deprives the team of one of its most brilliant players.

POISON VICTIM'S LIFE IN BALANCE

Mrs. Maude Sanford Takes Same Drug That Took Life of Young Macon Broker.

PHYSICIANS HAVE HOPES

Young Man Who Said He Had Swallowed Thirty Grains Is Puzzle to Doctors.

Physicians at the Casualty Hospital said today that they could not declare Mrs. Maude Sanford, victim of bichloride of mercury poisoning, out of danger until ten days or two weeks have elapsed, although they believe that Mrs. Sanford has a better chance to recover than nearly all victims of this poison.

This afternoon Mrs. Sanford is reported resting easily at the hospital, where she ran last evening with her husband a few minutes after she had taken the poison.

Good Chance to Recover.

"Mrs. Sanford has an excellent chance of recovery," said Dr. W. J. Lally, of the hospital staff, this afternoon. The fact that her husband administered white of egg to her at once and that then she was brought to the hospital for further treatment is what gives ground for hope. It does not seem likely that Mrs. Sanford has the poison distributed through her system, a condition of affairs which made hopeless the case of B. Saunders Walker, of Atlanta, in whose fate the whole country was recently interested.

"But a certain verdict cannot be pronounced for some days, ten or eleven at least. Each day that elapses without unfavorable symptoms being shown is, of course, making for hopefulness. Yet the nature of suffering from bichloride of mercury is such that considerable time must elapse before we can be sure."

Besides Mrs. Sanford, a young man of Washington is suffering from swallowing bichloride tablets, but what is his condition is not known, because he has ceased to visit his physician and does not live at the address he left at the Casualty Hospital.

Thirty Grains.

This young man is one William Curtin, who appeared May 7 at the Casualty Hospital saying he had swallowed thirty grains of bichloride of mercury dissolved in water. He was treated and urged to remain in the hospital but refused. One or two nights later Curtin appeared again for treatment and since then he has not been seen. Inquiry at the address he left at the hospital revealed that no man of that name had ever lived there.

"According to all the precedents, Curtin ought to be dead," said one of the Casualty physicians, "for he did not come for treatment until long after he had swallowed the water with the mercury dissolved in it."

No man of the name of Curtin has died since this youth appeared at the hospital, according to the mortality records of the district.

Mr. Sanford took the three bichloride tablets by mistake for aspirin tablets early last evening. She had suffered from a headache early in the day and on returning after a shopping trip with her mother to their home at 816 North Carolina avenue southeast, at 5 p. m. her head ached more violently. Her mother urged her to take some aspirin, but Mrs. Sanford said she would wait until she had dined.

Swallows Three.

After dinner, however, Mrs. Sanford went upstairs and took from a drawer a bottle which she thought contained the aspirin. She swallowed three of the tablets.

She came downstairs, and told her husband she felt a burning in her throat. Sanford, who is employed in the dispensary at the navy yard, knew there was a bottle of the mercury tablets in the same washstand drawer, and he rushed upstairs. The bichloride receptacle lay on the stand. Almost instantly he led his wife to the kitchen and gave her the white of eight eggs. Then the two raced for the Casualty Hospital, where five blocks from the Sanford home.

Here three physicians immediately used a stomach pump on Mrs. Sanford. One tablet was removed whole, and the other two tablets were taken out in broken pieces. The fact that Mrs. Sanford had just eaten a hearty meal helped, it is believed, to prevent the poison from being distributed through her system before removal.

In the case of the Atlanta victim he bichloride had been swallowed for twenty-four hours before it was guessed that there was anything wrong.

England and Wales Show Decrease in Births

LONDON, June 8.—The return for the first quarter of 1913 show that the births in England and Wales number 28,220, which is at the rate of 2.8 a thousand, a decrease of .1 below the average of the last ten years and the lowest on record.

The deaths number 14,536, which is at the rate of 1.5 a thousand, a decrease of .1. The marriages are at the rate of 1.5 a thousand, which is an increase of .6.
